Hope is a simple word, but it carries a profound impact. Over the past year, we’re proud to say Good Days® has been making tremendous strides in keeping hope alive for thousands of people. Through the dedicated efforts of our staff and partners, our organization grows year after year – increasing our network of caring professionals and the number of patients our programs may support.

In 2014, Good Days was able to assist approximately 100,000 patients. It’s with the continuing support of our generous donors that these patients are able to experience real hope.

Moving forward, Good Days promises to stay true to its mission: Improve the health and quality of life for patients in need. We understand Good Days is a lifeline people depend on, and we want our patients to know we’ll always be here to help in any way we can. After all, that is what family is all about.

There are millions of patients all over the United States struggling with chronic disease, cancer and life-altering conditions who are forced to go without the medications and treatments that could offer relief. Although many patients have valid insurance, an estimated 1 in 3 Americans report having difficulty paying their medical bills. For these patients, the dream of better days can seem all too distant. Good Days exists to give them hope.

Through our unique business structure, fundraising initiatives and progressive assistance programs, we’re able to help keep hope alive for thousands of patients. We provide the support and financial assistance they urgently need while continuously making strides to remove barriers to patients’ access.

93% of every dollar goes directly to patients in need
Good Days provides financial support for patients who cannot afford the medication they urgently need. With our proprietary enrollment system, we have streamlined the application process so patients can be conditionally approved in just minutes.

Same-Day Approval

Our program ensures patients receive their treatments quickly and easily – all enrollment forms are processed the same day they are received. Once approved, patients are given enough funding to cover their treatments for the balance of the calendar year.

Direct-to-Patient Assistance (DTPA)

Good Days measures its effectiveness in the delivery of financial assistance by Direct-To-Patient Assistance (DTPA). It measures how many cents of each dollar goes directly to funding out-of-pocket expenses on a calendar year basis.
While the Affordable Care Act states every citizen should be able to afford insurance coverage, patients fighting chronic disease are often forced into financially demanding situations. At Good Days, we help patients with the cost of their insurance premiums through our Premium Assistance Program – working to ensure people have the right coverage to fit their individual needs.

Our program ensures patients receive their treatments quickly and easily
The progressive assistance programs offered through Good Days come with strict regulations in order to ensure patients are compliant with their treatment regimen. Sometimes, however, staying compliant can prove difficult when long distance travel is needed. Our exclusive Travel Concierge Program was specially created to help facilitate a patient’s access to healthcare whenever travel is required.

Transportation
We offer transportation services, from road to air, for pre-approved medical appointments as determined by the patient’s prescribing physician.

Lodging
From time to time, healthcare appointments require an overnight stay. We help patients arrange lodging as well as cover the expense.

Ancillary Travel Costs
Our Concierge Program works closely with patients to make sure secondary travel expenses, such as parking, fuel and meals, are also covered.
For a patient suffering, a day can make all the difference in the world – and there's one day in particular we hope everyone will soon recognize.

Finding Hope When You Need It

Len Rogers committed most of his life to helping others. It was his calling. From his work through Youth of Christ to launching his own non-profit organization that assists Middle East families in need, Len is a shining example of the good that can come from placing someone’s needs before your own. In 2003, however, something happened that threatened his calling.

Len was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, a cancer of plasma cells that made him more susceptible to disease, caused strong neuropathy in his legs, and made his bones very brittle. His doctors estimated he had only two months to two years to live. As if the shock from hearing the news of his condition was not frightening enough, Len and his wife Pauline were soon faced with the staggering out-of-pocket costs of the treatment that could improve the quality of his life.

“I estimated that to pay the out-of-pocket for the treatment, we would have had to sell our home and within a short time be on the street,” Len said. It was devastating news that left the Rogers searching for help. They found Good Days.

Shortly after filling out the application for assistance, Len was overjoyed to receive word that Good Days would help pay the costs for his treatment including two bone marrow transplants. And it was made possible with the gracious support of caring donors and dedicated staff. Thanks in part to Good Days, Len and Pauline were able to keep hope alive in their hearts and continue living life to the fullest.

“I would not be here if it were not for Good Days,” Len said. “Good Days allowed us to keep our home and live a normal life and continue the work we love.”

Living for the Good Days

A loving and devoted family is a profound joy to have in life. For Kris Montano, having a family who showered her with support after being diagnosed with multiple myeloma meant having the strength to fight on.

Multiple myeloma is an incurable cancer that forms in a person’s plasma cells, causing cancer cells to accumulate in bone marrow. In place of producing helpful antibodies, the cancer cells instead produce abnormal proteins that lead to serious kidney problems. For many patients, a diagnosis like Kris’ also means having to face a seemingly insurmountable mountain of financial burden.

After contacting Good Days, however, Kris and her family were given a reason to hope again. She was approved for both financial assistance and travel assistance programs, enabling her to successfully undergo the treatments that would give her and her family better days.

“When we got that acceptance letter, it’s almost like we won the lottery,” Steve, Kris’ brother, said. “It’s amazing and it’s such a relief.” Today, Kris is able to maintain much of her independence, working a part-time job and providing a good life for her child.

It’s the support of our donors that give stories like Kris’ happier endings. Our most heartfelt appreciation goes out to everyone who helps keep hope alive for all our patients and their families.
